Any treaty would probably contain a clause providing for its abrogation siter a year or two by either party, and delay in planting much of the available ground, so that five or even ten years might clapse before the Islands would reach the full capacity of their production: and the changes from the present circumstances would be very gradual. If there be any serious objection to reciprocity, it must be basedelther on a large, audden or a very large ultimate ocrease in importation; and neither appears probable to us; that is, considering the word "large" In reference to the sugar consumption of the United States, though the case would be different in reference to the past production of the Hawaiian Islands. We must not overlook the beet augar industry which is confined in the United States to California, and it deserves the protection of Congress as much relatively as the iron farnaces of Pennsylvania or the cotton mills of Massachusetts. Our beet augar companies are not yet in a condition to regard with indifference the free importation of foreign sugar and they would soon close if the sugars of Peru and Manila were admitted without duty; but we presume they would not be seriously injured by reci procity with the Hawaiian Islands, especially if the treaty should provide only for the free adultsion of raw sugars. It is very doubtful whether the refining could be done with profit in the Islands, but it is not well for our Government to encourage experi ments there in that line at present. The Hawaila

But it would be a great mistake on our part to show any anxiety for unnexation, or even to consent to it, if offered by the Hawaiian Government, unless we knew that it was acceptable to the majority of the Hawaiian people. When they solicit annexation as a favor, and not till then, should we seriously entertain any proposition in reference to the matter. It should be our policy to treat Canada, Mexico and the Islands near to us on the Atlantic and Pacific, with such justice and gencreaty that they will beg the privilege of coming under our flag, and that they will even change their laws, if we see fit to make the change a condition of our consent. From the San Francisco Bulletin. Reciprocity with Hawaii.

The reciprocity question is again being agitated in the Hawaiian Kingdom. The last mail brings intelligence that a petition has been presented to the King, signed by prominent merchants of Honolulu, requesting the Government to negotiate with Washington on the subject. This petition has been forwarded to the Legislature by the King, with a recommendation that action be taken upon it, and it may be expected, in the present temper of public feeling in the islands, that an appropriation will be made for sending an embassy to this country to conduct the negotiations. Since the decline of whaling, the only important interest in Hawaii is that connected with the production of sugar. The question of finding a profitable market for their sugar is an all-absorbing one to the planters. A few months ago the sugar planters of Hawaii thought they had found this in the Australian colonies, and a superior of their sugar is an index of their sugar is an index of their own. It is said, and with some force, that upon the death of the present King, there being no more direct representatives of Kamehameha, the islands must gravitate to ward this Republic. There is now before the United States Senate, waiting for action, when Congress reassembles, a proposal for renewing reciprocity with Canada, and the California Leg islatere has asked Congress to negotiate a similar treaty with Mexico. The application of Hawait will make a third, so that the whole question of cultivating commercial connections with our neighbors will come up for review at the ensuing session of Congress.
